Note: Question (i) about summary writing is carrying 06 marks while rest of the questions carry (6+4x3=18) 03 marks each.

The menace of drug abuse is not just limited to Pakistan but it is a global problem. Every year on June 26, The United Nations International Day against drug abuse and illicit trafficking is celebrated. The purpose of this is to raise awareness among people about the harmful effects of drugs on the society. So the first step is definitely making youngsters aware of the problem.

Initially, drug addiction either begins in fun for momentary pleasure, or just to get accepted in a particular social circle, but it surely ends up devastating the individual as well as his family. Experts believe that Pakistan's goal to become a drug-free society can be achieved through creating awareness at the grass root level against the deadly addiction. Therefore, Pakistan is striving hard to eliminate drugs to achieve the set goal of a "drug-free society". For this purpose, nationwide anti-drug awareness campaigns are launched in collaboration with public and private educational institutions to keep the younger generation safe and away from the curse. These campaigns are aimed at creating awareness among students and citizens about the lethality of drugs and measures for its prevention.

Anti Narcotic Force is playing a leading role to educate the people against drug abuse. Pakistan has recently launched the next phase of the country programme in collaboration with the world Anti-Doping Agency, which includes separate barracks in prisons for drug addicts and a national database of drug offenders, as well as anti-drug initiatives.

The Government of Pakistan has started taking action against drugs and its abuse. Countermeasures are being deployed and drug dealers and pushers are being dealt with increased strictness. Q. 2 Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions appended to it.

Note: Question (i) about summary writing is carrying 06 marks while rest of the questions carry (6+4x3=18) 03 marks each.

Health and well-being are the buzzwords that we hear a lot about today. They are two different things but are connected to each other. Health can be thought of as the state of being free from injury or illness. Physical health means living in a body that is strong, capable, and free of disease. Mental health, meanwhile, means having a mind that is strong and free of disease. If we are mentally healthy, we can navigate daily life and its setbacks without excessive or debilitating stress, frustration, anxiety, or sadness. Taken together, physical and mental health affects everything we do.

If you consult the dictionary, health and well-being might be described as the absence of “negative” things like mental distress and physical illness. A more positive well-being definition might be the maintenance of physical, mental and emotional stability and balance – not just the absence of illness. One significant impediment to health and well-being that most of us experience is stress. When stress affects us, it bleeds into every aspect of our lives, including our relationship and personal lives.

Stress is a factor that impacts well-being. When people experience excessive stress, it increases the risk that they will also develop depression. Developing depression drastically decreases a person’s well-being. Once this happens, a person’s physical health also begins to suffer. While depression is technically a mental disorder, it has real impacts on the body. For some people, depression causes weight changes, gastrointestinal upset, forgetfulness, difficulty with short-term memory, and much more. The bottom line is this: it’s impossible to perform well or stay physically or mentally healthy when well-being is lacking.

Q. 2 Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions appended to it.

Note: Question (i) about summary writing is carrying 06 marks while rest of the questions carry (6+4x3=18) 03 marks each.

The benefits of travel are endless, and so we cannot emphasize enough how important it is to travel. We can acquire a great deal of knowledge from books, but it is only second-hand knowledge. By travelling, we come into direct contact with things that we need to know. By travelling, we not only gain knowledge but also broaden our nature. Like the frog in the well, the man who sticks to his home has a narrow vision of the world. In the places we travel to, we encounter people with different temperatures, customs, and habits, and learn to deal with them.

The benefits of travelling are not one-dimensional; it changes you not only psychologically but also physically. The most prominent health benefit of travelling is reduced stress from home and work. While travelling, you break your daily routine and immerse yourself in new surroundings and experiences. After a trip, people often feel rejuvenated and refreshed. Besides, it is also proven that travelling boosts your mood and even increases your happiness. Happiness has many implications, such as promoting a healthy life style, boosting the immune system, protecting the heart, and reducing pain. In addition to the mind, travelling also positively affects the body.

Travel also helps us brush up our knowledge of foreign languages. If, for example, we travel to England for a few weeks, we shall be able to speak English better through our contact with native speakers.

During early and difficult times of Pakistan's emergence, Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah undertook a countrywide tour. He aimed at arousing people's spirit. "Do not be overwhelmed by the enormity of the task," he said in a speech at Lahore. "There are many examples in the history of the young nations building themselves up by sheer determination and the force of character. You are made of sterling material and second to none. Keep up your morale. Do not be afraid of death. We should face it bravely to save the honour of Pakistan and Islam. Do your duty and have faith in Pakistan. It has come to stay." The entire journey of the great leader's struggle for a separate homeland for the Muslims of the sub-continent was based on the pivot of the Muslim unity and oneness as a nation. He talked about Pakistan in such clear terms that even a common man could understand it. "We are a nation." He affirmed three years before the birth of Pakistan, "with our own distinctive culture and civilization, language and literatures, art and architecture, names and nomenclature, sense of values and proportion, legal laws and moral codes, customs and calendar, history and traditions, aptitude and ambitions – in short, we have our own distinctive outlook of life.
